CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

Seventeenth Day.

THURSDAY, June 21. President Dole called the Convention to order at 10 a.m.

Delegate Hitchcock by letter asked to be excused from further at-

Vice President Wilder presented a report from the majority of the special committee on woman suffrage. It was against granting the privilege in the Constitution, but recommended a new Article giving the Legislature power to grant it. Coun. Brown presented a minor-ity report, giving the opinion that woman's proper place is in the home, and recommending that the petition be laid on the table. Del. Kalua moved the adoption of the minority report. This was a new question and confined entirely to Honolulu. There had been nothing heard about the question in the country districts. Woman's franchise would extend the field of political corruption. It would take many years for the Hawaiian women. especially, to qualify for the suf-frage. Let the women stay at home where they belong, and leave the making of laws to the men. Introducing women into active politics would breed discord in families. The royalist women of Honolulu lately presented a memorial to the American Minister, in which they called themselves "we the people of Hawaii." This showed that the women were not fit to engage in polities. Vice Pres. Wilder moved the adoption of the majority report. One would think to hear the previous speaker that the life or death of this nation depended on the passage of the minority report. Very little was asked in the majority report. It simply recommended that the Legislature might at some future day, when there was more light on the question, enact a law on the subject. This was a question that would not down. It was coming to the front in every State in the American Union, and wherever women had received the franchise nothing but praise was heard of the results. Surely the Legislature that might take up the question ought to be as wise as this Convention, and all the majority asked was that it should not be necessary, to legislate on the question, that the end should be subjected to the tedious process of amending the Constitution. Min. Damon seconded the motion to adopt the majority report with pleasure. They had heard the delegate from Wailuku declaim with the fiery eloquence of his race against the idea of allowing women any part in politics. He would refer that speaker back to the time of Kamehameha II., when Hawaiian women were freed from the oppres-sion of tabus, and they had been free ever since. The same speaker bad said that the only place this agitation was heard was in Honolulu. If he kept his ears open he would hear the question being dis-cussed all round the world. It was the coming question and could not be repressed. This movement for the emancipation of women was revolutionizing India. There was nothing so very startling about the proposition that women should be allowed to vote. Voting was only a matter of detail. Min. Smith would not like to see the recommendation of the majority passed as it stood. He would therefore propose an amendment to confine the franchise, if ever granted, to women who had the same qualifi catious as male voters for Senators. There was a great deal of loose women, emancipating women, and so on was empty. Woman ruled the world to day by her care of the $187.60. home, her love and devotion. There was great danger in woman suffrage that it would degrade instead of elevate women. A great deal of the evils of politics was due to the inatbelieve that women would be any more faithful in that respect. The movement for emancipation of women in India had nothing to do with the franchise. He believed that a majority of the women of this community was against the movement. It was at least very doubtful if giving the vote to women would cause any improvement in Hawaiian polities. Vice Pres. Wilder was willing to accept the amendment proposed by Miu. Smith.

Del. Baldwin agreed with his colleague from Maui that woman suffrage would only be adding to the ignorant vote of this country. The transition from a monarchy to a republic was a sudden one, and it was not wise to add to the complications of the situation. His colleague had given them a good idea of the feel ings of the Hawaiians on this matter. It would be a most dangerous experiment to grant woman the franchise. He had read in the paper [the BULLETIN] last evening that Mr. Wilder told the ladies they had his sympathy but not his judgment. After hearing his report he thought they had also captured his judgthere that she wielded a mighty influence on politics by training up som the voters of the future. He thought plyit very unwise to place a provision suffrage. How did they know that the Legislature would know more about the question than they knew

Del. Kauhane favored the majority report. He thought some of the speakers showed dread of the ladies. With the provision in the Constitution there would be an incentive to women to qualify themselves for the rivilege.

Coun. Brown regarded the proposition as entirely too radical to be made easy of adoption in this country. If this provision were put in the Constitution there would likely Coun. Brown regarded the proposition as entirely too radical to be made easy of adoption in this country. If this provision were put in the Constitution there would likely be au agitation set on foot forthwith for a woman suffrage law. It was placing entirely too much power in the next or any succeeding Legislature, to allow it to make such a radical change by a suap judgment.

cal change by a snap judgment.
This question had only come up within the past twenty-five or thirty years, and this country could wait a while longer for the benefit of the experience of other countries. Del. Kahaulelio was at first some what favorable to the movement, but on reflection for the past few days he had concluded it was not well to grant women the franchise at the present time. It was not foreign women he thought of in the matter, but the native Hawaiian women. A woman would not look well marching up to the polls with one or two men bolding each of her arms. (Laughter.) Under the qualifica-tions very few Hawaiian women could vote, and for that reason alone he would oppose the majority re-

Del. Carter remarked that a grave fault in the Attorney-General's amendment was the property quali-fication. It was worthless as a test of intelligence. They either inherited the property or got it from their husbands in most cases. For his part he believed in woman suffrage, as he did in universal suffrage, but the people he represented had not had an opportunity of discussing this question. In the present state of affairs the question of woman suffrage would be an addition to serious complications. The giving to one Legislature of the power to make such a serious change was entirely too radical.

The ayes and noes were called on the minority report, to lay the peti-tion on the table, when it was adopt-ed on the following vote: Ayes — Ables, Allen, Baldwin, Bolte, Brown, Carter, Fernandes, Iosepa, Kahaulelio, Kalua, McCand-
